

Middlebury Middlebury Greenway

Trail Highlights

The Middlebury Greenway is to be a picturesque walking and biking trail converted from an old trolley bed that runs through Middlebury to the Waterbury town line. Certain areas are still under construction; when complete the trail will extend the entire width of the town from the Waterbury to the Woodbury town lines. The existing trolley bed is the site of the annual town-wide "Walk for the Greenway" held every April. Flowers, landscaping, and informational signs will highlight the trail, which is visible from Route 64 (Middlebury Road). The trail will traverse local points of interest such as Quassy Amusement Park, Meadowview Park, Ledgewood Park, Bristol Park, little league fields, and several office buildings and shopping areas. Lake Quassapaug, Lake Elise, and Fenn Pond will easily be accessed from the trail as well.

Some sections not yet complete. Construction scheduled for 2001.
